At St. John's Presbyterian Fair, held in San Francisco lately, the visitors voted on which was the most popular newspaper in the city. At last accounts the Examiner and Alta led and were nearly even. The Chronicle stood third and last, while neither the Bulletin, Call nor Post were entered in the list.

ONCE more, and for the fortieth time, Hon. CHAS. E. DeLONG announces from the stump that he has not withdrawn from the Senatorial canvass of Nevada. He affects to believe that something—a thunderbolt, an earthquake, or a Providential visitation in some other shape—will defeat SHARON. CHARLIE'S hope is fallacious—a Will of the wisp. The only show to defeat SHARON is to elect a Democratic majority in the Legislature, and even then the majority must be men blind to the glitter of gold, or honest old WILLIAM will make them see virtues in him that his recording angel never dreamed of.

THOSE of our visitors who had occasion to pass along or across Main street any time during yesterday, will form very curious ideas concerning the remonstrance of certain property-holders, in which it was set forth that the street was in as good order as it could be placed. After the rain of Monday night, Main street was in a deplorable condition for traveling purposes. The mud was deep—deep enough for any purpose—but its consistency was not all that was desirable. It was too thick for boats and too thin for wheeled vehicles. A stout man with high-topped boots could ford the thoroughfare if he was careful to keep on the ripples, but for women and children, or even weak men, to attempt the passage was simply to tempt Providence; yet when the Council propose to improve the street the property-holders solemnly aver that it is in as good condition as it is possible the place it.

Party Mud Slingers.

If the Granger is compelled to decide for which party's candidate he will vote from information obtained through reading the partisan papers, he will have great difficulty in determining which ticket is most deserving of his support. The argument for and against is one of erudition and re-erudition—of the kettle's denunciation of the pot's color. The Republican journals aver that whatever is wrong is made so by the Democrats, and the Democratic papers fill their columns with the exclamation "Thou canst not say we did it; we were not in authority." The Republicans respond that the Democrats would have shown no cleaner hands than they, had the opportunity to plunder, malfeasance and other ugly business presented itself. It seems to be a case of "you're another," and if the facts are ever reached it will not be accomplished through light shed by party organs. The Granger is not, however, so easily duped as party leaders would have us think. In this State the party record is a book within the reach of all, and the chronicles are so legibly written that all may read and understand. The leaders may denounce each other and the organs may charge and deny but all will not suffice. The honest voter has learned to read and think for himself. Men—especially the laboring men—have reached that stage in the scale of political progression when they will no longer accept as fact the unsustained assertion of a political leader or a partisan journal. They have learned the importance of demanding the proof and if it is not forthcoming from the party organ, they will satisfy themselves by applying to the independent journal, which they know speaks of party and candidates as it finds them, influenced by interest and unbiased by prejudice. With this source of information within his reach the Granger will turn from the partisan pleading and cast his vote for candidates that are honest and capable, recking little on which ticket their names appear.

The Farmer and the Ring.

The failure of MORGAN'S Sons, the accredited shipping agents of the Grangers, seems to be a matter for exultation on the part of that portion of the press which has never been able to see anything good in the Grange movement, and there are not a few of those sapient gentlemen who are crying out "I told you so!" We have no disposition to argue the right or wrong of the policy adopted by the firm that has just found itself compelled to suspend business. A glance at the case inclines us to the opinion that the house of MORGAN'S Sons fell into an ambush laid for it by the wily old wheat ring managers, who would willingly spend a few million dollars to break up the system of protection guaranteed the farmer through the Grange organization. The Grange Agency secured a large amount of tonnage at figures which would have been considered reasonable under the tonnage monopoly. This contract system seems to have been the only weak and assailable point in the programme, and circumstances conspired to make the attack on this point very effective. The ring had also secured a large amount of tonnage, which at the rates they intended to charge they could not use, for the reason that they could not obtain the wheat to load it. Their plans were soon laid. They held their own tonnage and waited until the Grange agents had contracted for all the tonnage to be secured. They then reduced the rate of the tonnage under their control below the price at which MORGAN'S sons had contracted to pay and commenced loading with wheat purchased at the price demanded by the farmers. This bit of strategy enabled them to deliver wheat in Liverpool at a less figure than MORGAN'S Sons could afford under their tonnage contract. It was a clear case of over-reach, and the pains and expense to which the ring went to accomplish their purpose only proves how anxious they were to destroy a system which completely broke up their old monopoly and prevented the continuance of a business by which they were realizing millions at the expense of the farmer. If, as is claimed by some of the monopoly organs, the Grange did not interfere with the purchase and profit of the ring dealers, it seems a bit of absurdity on their part to incur the expense and trouble they have to break up the Grange agency by bankrupting the house of MORGAN'S Sons. We are told in a tone and spirit of rejoicing that the farmers have lost heavily through the failure of their wheat agents. What is the aggregate of their loss we are not informed, and will concede that it is a large amount, but large as it is, we do not believe it will foot up one quarter of the sum they would have been swindled out of had the ring been permitted to carry out their hitherto successful programme of purchasing the wheat at their own price. A new line of argument recently adopted by the ring journals is the ringing of changes on the word "merchant" with the evident intention of creating an impression in the minds of the public that the merchant is the "middleman" against whom the Grange is protecting the farmer. This would be a shrewd dodge, were it not so transparent that it will not deceive a single well informed man. The Grange does not fight the merchant. Its warfare is with the ring and its agents, which are the real middlemen. We cannot discover the force of the argument against the Grange which some of our contemporaries affect to see in the failure of the house of MORGAN'S Sons.

Orange Culture in Los Angeles County.

EDITOR HERALD: Some three or four years ago I was requested by a gentleman resident of this city, to answer a letter which he had received from a native of Los Angeles county, then a student at the Santa Clara College, to whom application had been made for information respecting the culture of the orange in this county. The letter contained a number of interrogatories which will in some respects account for the form and character of the answer. A copy of the answer was at the time furnished the editor of the Star and published in that paper, but as there are at this time many persons engaging in the cultivation of the orange who were not residents of this county at that time, and who may not have read it, and as it has been suggested to me that its re-publication might be acceptable to many of your readers, I have revised and re-written it, and it is at your service if you think it worth printing in the HERALD.

J. J. WARNER.

The orange tree in respect to the food which it obtains from the earth is a coarse feeder. It thrives well in a soil of vegetable mold, in micaceous and granitic sands containing alkali (natron) and but little clay or vegetable mold in gravelly clay and volcanic soils. In respect to soil its chief requisites are warmth, friability and moistness. It does not flourish in a wet cold soil, but in a dry soil it cannot be irrigated to excess if the soil is kept loose and friable.

While not readily affected by the constituents of the soil traversed by its roots, the orange tree is extremely sensitive respecting the state and condition of the atmosphere which surrounds its limbs and foliage. A warm and serene atmosphere is its delight. It is propagated from seed. The orange trees of this county are mostly seedlings. They are a long lived tree. They commence bearing when eight or ten years old. The oldest orchard in California is at San Gabriel. It has been in bearing more than fifty years, and the trees are still vigorous and fruitful, although they have not received the best of treatment. From where the trees or seeds of that orchard came I am ignorant, although, as the orchard was planted by Spanish Roman Catholic Missionaries, who came from Mexico through Peninsular California, which has been occupied by Jesuit Missionaries for many years previously, it is probable that the seeds were brought from Lower California. They might, however, have been brought from some one of the Mexican ports on the main. A large proportion of the orange trees of this county have been propagated from seeds from the San Gabriel orchard.

There has been some importation of trees from the coasts of Mexico and Central America, and of seeds from the Society and other Islands of the Pacific, but I am not aware of any notable difference in the product of these trees from such sources. Thirty feet apart the ground has acquired a good degree of warmth, is, whether correctly or not, most generally considered by those who have had the most experience the preferable season. Thirty feet apart is a common distance for planting the trees. It is the opinion of some persons that the trees should be forty feet apart in order to permit the rays of the sun to have free and direct access to the ground, which they can have only in a limited degree after the trees are grown, if planted only thirty feet apart. As the trees will grow and flourish and bear as abundantly for a number of years at a less distance than thirty feet, it might be both economical and profitable, if the trees for planting are not too costly, to plant the trees only twenty feet apart, and subsequently as they grow and overshadow the ground, remove one-half of the trees and make a new orchard, or sell them, as might be most desirable. With care, orange trees can be successfully taken up and carried a considerable distance and replanted, and they have come into bearing, without a loss of more than two crops.

In transplanting from the nursery, where, to force the rapid growth in height of the young tree without regard to the girth of the bole, they are cultivated in such close proximity that neither lateral branches or roots can grow, the tap or vertical roots should not be cut or broken, and the hole in which they are to be planted should be deep enough to admit these roots in their former or natural perpendicular condition. The lateral roots should not be deeply buried, but should be near the surface, so that they could be communicated to the soil by the sun.

With regard to the season of the year for the transplanting of the orange tree with the least check to its growth, there are reasons for doubting the more prevalent practice of transplanting late in the Spring or in the early part of the Summer. The best time for transplanting the orange, as well as other trees, being those which are at rest, or in that condition most nearly approaching a state of inactivity. While the circulation of the sap is the least active, and when it is descending rather than when it is ascending, the current predominates. The roots of a tree cannot be separated from the soil without destroying a large number of their spongioles, and the damage sustained by a tree in the process of transplanting, is in proportion to the number of spongioles it loses in the operation. If a tree is taken up when it is at rest, when the circulation of the sap, if not suppressed, is languid and the flow to the roots predominates, the loss of the spongioles will be less hurtful, and new ones will be soon formed by the descending sap; while if, on the other hand, the tree is torn from the ground when the spongioles are strained to their utmost capabilities by the heavy and constant draft made on them by the leaves, every pore of which is distended in the work of absorption and exhalation, and while the upward flow is largely retarded by the downward flow, and the sap providers suddenly diminished in number, their connection with the source from which their supplies are derived severed, the tree must receive a shock from which even a part of the organic system must suffer, and great exhaustion of the tree will ensue before the supremacy of the downward flow can be secured and new rootlets with their spongioles formed.

It is not improbable that practical orange culturists may have reached an erroneous conclusion as to the best time for replanting from an error in their mode of planting out an orchard. It is not unusual in the replanting of a tree to plant the roots much deeper in the ground than they originally grew. In an orange tree, the roots of which require, in this latitude, all the heat they can obtain from the sun, should be taken up in the Fall or Winter season, and instead of being replanted at the same depth in the soil which it previously occupied, should be buried much deeper, so that the roots received no warmth from the sun during the Winter and not until the heat of the Summer's sun had penetrated the soil down to where they had lain buried in the cold for so long a period, it would not be surprising if the tree should suffer more by the operation than if it had remained in its original position until the soil in which it is destined to have its roots buried had acquired some warmth from the late Spring and early Summer sun.

[To be concluded to-morrow.]

Merced Theatre.

A full house assembled to witness the second appearance of the Florence Kent Troupe at Merced Theatre last night. The play presented was Uncle Tom's Cabin, the part of Eva played by the little Miss Lulu Wilson and the other parts were played by Florence Kent and the full company. To-night will be presented for the first time in Los Angeles the comedy in three acts entitled "Caste," and on Saturday afternoon a matinee will be given. This company is constantly increasing in favor with our theatre-goers, and full audiences may be expected during the rest of the engagement.

The Sacramento Bee of the 23d inst. says: "The train from the East came in to-day with twelve, and left for the West with thirteen cars. There were two baggage cars, showing that the people bring their baggage with them to a considerable extent."

THE ANNUAL FAIR.

Two Exciting Races at the Track—What is to be seen at the "Hink"—The Annual Address by Governor Downey.

[SECOND DAY.]

The annual fair of the Southern District Agricultural Society is now at its height and success is assured. Our hotels are thronged and visitors by the score are here from all sections of Southern California, with a large delegation from San Francisco and the upper coast.

AT THE RACE TRACK.
The heavy rains of the preceding night very materially interfered with yesterday's performances at the racing grounds. The chill air kept many ladies from the races and the heavy track caused many of the sterner sex to forego the pleasures of the promised trials of speed. The attendance was about as large as on Monday; had the elements been favorable at least twice as many would have been on the grounds. To-day the track will be in first-class condition and a big crowd may be expected as the races for the day promise to be of unusual interest.

THE FIRST RACE.
Was for trotters, free for all three-year-olds, mile heats to harness, best two in three, for a purse of $300; $150 to first, $80 to second and $40 to third. The entries were as follows:

L. J. Rose enters b. g. Tommy Gates, sire the Moor, dam unknown. Oscar Macey enters blk. m. Morritea, sire the Moor, dam unknown. White Feet, another son of the Moor, had been entered by Lawyer Sanford, but did not put in an appearance at the call from the judges' stand. Before the horses had been called to the scratch the pools sold in Tommy Gates' favor at odds of $40 to $15. The mare won the pole and a fair start was secured. After an even and capital race around the first turn Tommy Gates went to the front, making the first quarter in 47 seconds, and at least twenty yards in advance. The half mile was made in 1:25, without any change in the position of the contestants. The mare made strenuous efforts to close the gap, but the bay increased the distance and went under the pole at least twenty lengths in advance. Time 3:20.

The backers of Morritea did not come to the front after this heat, as it was clearly manifest that Tommy Gates, who has trotted a mile in 1:18, had a sure thing on first money. On the second heat, Tommy Gates to the pole, Morritea started off slightly in advance, but the gelding closed in on her and shot ahead, passing the quarter pole several lengths in advance. This gap was maintained until on the last quarter when Tommy Gates made excellent speed, going under the wire just about as far ahead of the mare as in the first heat, thus securing both heats and the race. Time 3:19.

SUMMARY.
SOUTHERN DISTRICT AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, Los Angeles, October 27th.—Trotting: free for all three-year-olds; mile heats, to harness, best two in three. Purses, $300; $150 to first, $80 to second and $40 to third. L. J. Rose named b. g. Tommy Gates. Oscar Macey named blk. m. Morritea. Time, 3:20; 3:19.

THE RUNNING RACE.
Was the next in order, free for all three-year-olds raised and owned in the District; mile heats, best two in three, for a purse of $300—$150 to first, $80 to second and $40 to third. In the pool selling Regent was the favorite at long odds. The entries were as follows:

Geo. A. Johnston enters b. c. Regent, by Lord, dam Eva Combe. B. F. Bragg enters b. f. Nellie Gray, by Tenbroeck, dam unknown. John D. Young enters s. g. Shark, by Gray's Stark, dam unknown. Wm. R. Rowland enters blk. c. Careless, by Tenbroeck, dam unknown. Regent secured the position at the pole, Shark next, Careless next and Nellie Gray on the outside. Regent on the start shot ahead, the other three well locked close behind; at the quarter-pole Shark shot ahead and at the half-mile was side by side with Regent and these two had a good and close run to the third quarter, where Regent shot ahead and passed the score about three lengths in advance of Shark; Careless third and Nellie fourth, both about a length behind Shark. Time, 1:54.

The luck of Shark was exceedingly gratifying to his backers, but at the pools Regent was still the favorite at odds of $50 to $8 on the field. The second call was sounded and the horses went off in good style. At the quarter-pole Careless was in the front out all close together and at the half-mile three of them were in a bunch, with Nellie in the rear. Here Regent shot to the front and maintained the lead to the goal, coming in several lengths ahead, although Shark and Careless, spurred by the whip, made a good run to the home base. Time, 1:54.

Shark, it is reported, by some mistake, carried thirty-three pounds extra weight on this heat. The judges gave second money to Shark on the ground that Careless' rider had been guilty of foul riding. They maintained that rounding the first turn Careless' being next to the outside, had cut in and secured the pole, in so doing shortening the stride of both Regent and Shark and materially impeding the progress of these two horses.

tion of the track, first-class time may be expected. The races for the day are as follows:

AT THE RINK.

Last night there was a fair assemblage of ladies and gentlemen. The rink was finely lighted and the display most satisfactory. After the visitors had examined the many articles on exhibition, Gov. Downey, the President of the Association, was introduced and delivered the annual address. He commenced his remarks by congratulating the people upon the prosperous and satisfactory

CONDITION OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The grounds have been improved and rendered more attractive, and it is the intention of the Society to continue from year to year planting such trees as will be found adapted to our climate, useful as well as beautiful, and demonstrate here what might be done throughout the entire district. It is not an over estimate to place the value of our lands at $32,000, and our improvements at the lowest figure at $18,000, making the property of the Association worth $50,000.

A LICK AT THE STATE.

Great fault is found with the State Legislature in refusing to the Association the little aid heretofore extended, but the stockholders have nobly responded to meet all demands and magnanimously agreed to enable new-comers to purchase the unsold stock on the original basis although worth more than its par value—and this is done with a view to extend its usefulness and popularity. We contribute profusely to the State but get little in return. Notwithstanding the salubrity of our climate and our exquisite productions, if there be a State institution to be located, the people of Alaska could claim it as successfully as we. They had no hesitation in granting at one dash $15,000 of our money to be added to the grand stand at Sacramento, an institution that has already received large and extravagant sums for this thing continued. The Governor maintained that Southern California will have to

SET UP BUSINESS FOR HERSELF.

For as it now is we are only recognized as fit subjects for taxation, and that without representation. We can't get any representation in Congress and even in the matter of State Legislators are cheated.

JUST LOOK AT US!

Los Angeles is the leading county in many branches of industry—in sheep raising, wine and brandy and Indian corn and tropical fruits, and but two counties exceed us in the most precious of all products—our school children. In the number of our schools and the efficiency of our teachers there are none who exceed us, in proportion to our means and number of inhabitants. But the progress we have made in all that renders life agreeable is visible everywhere. We lead the van in the utilization of the water of our streams. We are second to none in our efforts to successfully extract the hidden resources of the earth and bring to the surface by means of artesian wells the life-giving fluid that has added so much in the last four years to the material wealth of Los Angeles county. We have adorned and beautified

THE CITY OF LOS ANGELES.

By the introduction of pure water for domestic and hygienic purposes, enabling us to beautify our grounds with ornamental trees, flowers, grass-plots and shrubbery, and this at extraordinary expense. Our houses are furnished with gas. We have built noble school-houses, established libraries, spanned the great gulches with bridges and submitted to be taxed to aid in the construction of railroads, with a view of making this county a center for a great system, which is now being accomplished, the benefits of which we are beginning to realize. Through the energy of our citizens we have procured the means from Government of making our roadstead a commodious harbor, and the productive energy of our people has

INCREASED OUR TONNAGE.

At such strides that we are now the second in this respect on the sea coast of the State. At the time we organized this Association, four steamers per month did the business of the coast. We have them now daily, and they are not sufficient for the demands of trade, and this picture is applicable to all parts of our Southern coast. Our wealth and population have doubled in four years.

HARD SPECIE FOREVER.

The speaker maintained that our hard money standard has saved us from panic and commercial disasters amid the ruin we have witnessed befall older communities. Our example will soon lead the nation to specie payment. It can easily be done. Silver should be made as much a standard of value as gold and a legal tender for any amount. Our Gold Note Banks should be established all over the country.

PROTECT OUR INDUSTRIES.

He maintained that industries must be protected, to protect and elevate labor. It is a great mistake to think that free trade will benefit the laboring man. Our manufacturers cannot compete with Europe. The free trade theory is a scheme of Great Britain to ruin us. We must have a just and equitable protective system and attract the skilled labor of the world to our shore.

THE SMALL FARM POLICY.

The multiplication of small farms in the District is the safest promise for the future. These small farms will insure a variety of crops and develop and utilize our water system, which, above all, is worthy of the highest consideration of the patriot, humanitarian and philosopher. We have good soil everywhere, on the hilltop and valley. Moisture is the consideration to be added, and should engage the ingenuity and skill of our people. Los Angeles is the NATURAL HOME OF THE GRAPE.

It thrives better, grows larger and sweeter here than anywhere else. The dryness of our climate at the period of maturing and gathering guarantees a crop of excellent quality, free from disease or mildew. The long continued Summer heat favors the development of grape sugar and aromas, and should necessarily warrant a most admirable quality of wine. If we have not the experience in making an acceptable and palatable table wine, it is not the fault of our soil or climate. We should secure the aid of the French and the Rhein country and regularly apprentice them to the business. We have now the experience before us that vines which have here been fruiting for seventy years will continue to yield well out over having missed a crop in their long life of productive usefulness. One acre of our soil will produce more than anywhere else and at a less cost and sounder and freer from disease. Why not then rival France in this branch of wealth? It will only require the intelligent effort of our people to make it. I regard this source of our wealth in this District as destined to surpass all others. Let each farmer plant a few acres in grape-vines.

HORSES AND TOBACCO.

After setting forth the advantages that result from horse-raising, the speaker called attention to tobacco culture. Our new industry, the tobacco crop, will prove one of great value. The superiority of the article now produced is beyond question. The adaptability of our soil and climate for producing a delicate and highly flavored quality is no longer a question; it is a solved fact. The value per pound of a good article of tobacco is so much greater than that of any of the cereals, or even that of the fruits or wine, that it will well bear the cost of transportation, freight and commission, leaving such a margin of profit to the producer as to justify our people in engaging in its cultivation to such an extent as will warrant the belief that before many years it will be one of our most valuable exports, besides keeping much money at home heretofore sent abroad for cigars and tobacco. We will have large factories devoted to the manufacture of it into the various forms in which the article is now so extensively used, thus giving employment to our people and tending to increase the circulation of money among our laboring and mercantile classes.

THE PERORATION.

The pleasure of living in a country like this, where all men are the arbiters of their own fortunes and social positions, is great, and has an irresistible charm for that manhood developed in this nineteenth century, the civilization of which stands out in grand relief in comparison with the past, and marking distinctly our country's distinction to the bigotry and fanaticism that made life a torture to the bulk of those of our race who have gone before us. Let us not forget that we have a duty to perform to the proudest ambition should be to advance the happiness of our race, and to inculcate the divine maxim of Him who never said anything without a divine significance, "Let us love one another."

THE DISPLAY.

In the absence of a more appropriate building, the Rink—by far the largest auditorium in the city—has been extemporized as a pavilion for the exhibition of the art department of the Fair. All of the available space in the large gallery was engaged some time before the beginning of the present week and the exhibitors were actively employed in arranging their goods in place during Monday and Tuesday. Last evening, however, was in order and the result proved a very creditable exhibition. If not a full, there was at least a fair, showing of farm and orchard products, works of art, manufactures, machinery, musical instruments, etc. The walls of the hall were decorated with specimens of fine-art, ladies' needle-work and fancy articles. Along the four sides goods were arranged for exhibition to the best advantage, and along through the center of the hall. Passing to the right from the entrance, the attention was first attracted by a fine display of dried fruits from of Mr. Geo. B. Davis. Arranged in boxes of convenient size with glass covers were samples of dried apples, pears and grapes so inviting in their appearance as almost to make one's mouth water upon seeing them. The apples and pears were cut into thin circular slices by machinery designed for the purpose, and were dried with a cleanly and fresh appearance altogether unknown to that prepared by the old process. Mr. Davis informed us that this fruit was still on the trees last Monday morning. It was picked, prepared and dried in one day—the drying process being performed in three hours, and the whole ready for market Tuesday morning. The raisins exhibited were those made from the Mission grapes only. Mr. Davis not having sufficient time to prepare specimens from Muscat grapes as he desired. The raisins were prepared in about six hours after picking the evaporators. Owing to the late date at which the works were completed and placed in operation, the exhibition of dried fruits was not so extensive as might have been desired, but was nevertheless the finest collection of the kind which has ever been made in Los Angeles, and augurs favorably for the future success of this important enterprise.

Miss Hattie Lehman has some very pretty dainties and other samples of crocheted work displayed on the wall immediately back of Mr. Davis' fruits.

Caswell & Ellis make a fine display of fancy groceries, canned and boxed fruits, etc.

Fisher & Thatchery display an elegant silver plate, with elaborate carving, as a specimen of the work done in establishment. Gishman, the jeweler, pronounced it one of the best, if not in fact the very best, work of the kind to be found in the State. [A full description of the carving was given in the HERALD a few days since, so we omit a more particular description of the design and artistic execution.]

Herberger & Johannes have arranged upon a platform carpeted with brussels an elegant display of furniture of their own manufacture. The upholstery is of a rich blue satin with gold flowers, and the woodwork of a dark rosewood, elegantly carved. The set consists of four chairs, two arm chairs, and a sofa of this pattern and of a lounge of another style. The whole collection forms a specimen of home manufacture which would be difficult to excel in any city.

Mrs. Devise exhibits some fine specimens of handiwork arranged in frames to represent baskets of flowers and wreaths, constructed of moss, shells, delicately colored feathers, etc.

A. Guillery, of the River wagon-shop, exhibits a spring delivery wagon of fine finish, manufactured for the French bakery, the trotting and painting done by Morsch & Manning. The total cost of the vehicle was about $550.

S. C. Foy makes an elegant display of saddles, harness, bridles, robes and other articles in his line. One saddle, which employed a workman about three months in its manufacture and is worth at a low estimate $300, is one of the chief attractions in the Pavilion. The leather is of the finest black, elegantly stamped and mounted with solid silver. The trimming is of Irish flax, interwoven in a most tasty design in the borders. The saddle will be raffled, at Williams' saloon next Saturday evening. Mr. Foy makes a specialty of the manufacture of saddle trees for the trade and those made by him have a reputation extending all the way to the Pacific coast. Some fine robes of Alaska and gray squirrel skins and lap-robes, bridles, whips, spurs, fair-leather saddles, a saddle with nickel plate, etc., complete the display.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Baker, of the Sewing Machine Exchange, have a full representation of machines for which they hold the agency. The number comprises the Florence, Grover & Baker, Howe, Singer, Sewer, Wheeler & Wilson, Wilcox & Gibbs and American. They also exhibit dress charts, machine appliances, oils, and general trappings belonging to the line.

Tuttle & Lee have on exhibition a good display of photographs and stereoscopic views.

Miss Kate Whiting displays three oil paintings which are very creditable to the art.

Miss Mary E. Bell has a wreath of hair-flowers made by herself at twelve years of age and bearing in the centre her picture, taken at the time. It is a neat and elegant piece of hair-work.

Prof. Havell exhibits two grand square pianos, one the manufacture of Hallett, Davis & Co. and the other of the New York and Boston. D. Maloney has a fine display of pen-drawing and writing, executed by himself. One specimen—a drawing of an orange limb, with fruit, leaves and flowers—is particularly meritorious.

Miss Lettie Heller has a sample of worsted and bead-work in a large frame representing Washington on the battle-field. The design is good and the execution is such that a very good likeness is produced.

Mr. Thomas Perkins of Azusa, shows some fine samples of cigars and plug tobacco manufactured from tobacco grown this year in his place.

The manufactured tobacco is of a fine quality, and the cigars wantonly good and thorough drying to make them some of the best in market. Mr. Perkins uses no artificial process, but the tobacco, but the old established method adopted in the tobacco growing States where he has large and valuable experience.

Mrs. Strelitz displays a table-spread with raised worsted work, in silk, floss, which she places on exhibition and offers for sale.

Miss Cloneta Williams has a sofa-pillow upon which is worked a bouquet of flowers in raised worsted. A very beautiful and novel ornament.

John T. Gordon of the Azusa has on exhibition some honey which is almost as clear as a crystal and a good representation of the best honey made in the State.

Miss Josie Dalton has a good collection of canned fruits, including apples, pears, figs, grapes, quinces, plums, etc. J. Lind exhibits and has on sale a variety of ornamental and useful cases, portfolios, match-boxes and various other handy contrivances adjusted to the pocket. These articles are manufactured in San Francisco and sold only through Mr. Lind, who has also a fine collection of native woods and finished in a manner to make them acceptable articles of toilet in the most tasty apparel. These are made by W. Brinkley, a very good turner, of San Francisco. All of these articles are sold very cheap.

Mrs. McNally has on display a piece-work counterpart of the log-cabin pattern which is offered for sale. It exhibits three pumpkins weighing respectively 108, 109 and 117 pounds. He also has baskets of fine apples and walnuts.

Concerning in the centre at the front, O. W. Childs has a complete assortment of semi-tropical fruits, arranged and presided over by Mr. E. Huber. The collection consists of walnuts, figs, chestnuts, limes, oranges, lemons, grapes, apples, pears, figs, citrons and several varieties of almonds.

Moritz Choyinski here brings in his new patent mosquito net apparatus which has been fully described heretofore and needs no further testimony as to its ingenuity and usefulness.

Workman Bros., in a large glass frame have a fine display of saddles, harness, bridles, whips, spurs and the thousand-and-one things pertaining to their line. An elegant saddle, silver mounted and valued at $300, is an object of constant admiration by all observers. The silver used was manufactured from Mexican dollars melted and moulded by Señor Santiago de Santra Cruz. The work is all elegant, trimmed and no expense has been spared to make it par excellence. The other articles on display are equally worthy a close inspection.

E. C. Glidden, the Los Angeles agent, has a display of the New Wilson Sewing Machine of different styles and prices, varying from $50 to $125. It is claimed that these machines of equal workmanship and excellence are sold twenty-five per cent. cheaper than those of other manufacturers. They will do all work that any sewing machine can do, from finest to coarsest.

Bell & Green have a display of harness and harness hardware showing fine workmanship and good stock. T. A. Garey has from his nurseries a full variety of young orange and lemon trees and a banana tree planted in boxes or tubs and forming a grove and shade for every garden. Several varieties of lemon were also introduced in the collection, and one we noticed eight months from the bud, measuring six feet in height.

Mr. H. Harrel has thirteen sewing machines on exhibition of the Wheeler & Wilson manufacture and ranging in price from $60 to $250. One of the Seor machines is also shown, which is claimed as one of the latest and best inventions or improvements in the line. Above the display is ranged in line nine diplomas for premiums taken at the several fairs of the State given this year. The agent of these machines is advised of the first prize premium which has been awarded for sewing machines in the State during the present season.

Brunk & Bruk come last but far from rival in the interest which they contribute to the general display. They have in a separate apartment from the main room a collection of fowls which could not be eclipsed at any poultry market in the country. To the several varieties are the Houdans, speckled white and black, and to be the finest layers in the world; the Leghorn, medium size, white and very valuable, a single rooster and pair of hens being worth $200; Buff Cochins, large, fine Winter layers; dark Bramah, large and good layers; light Brahma, large and also good layers. Some pet rabbits, together with a good supply of each breed of fowl complete the display. Two uncommonly smart educated chickens are among the number, and they will readily convince the observer that they know a thing or two. Messrs. Brunk and Bruk make a specialty of raising poultry and are also engaged in the bee-business. They are agents for the Poultry World—the standard authority on matters pertaining to fowls.

Two buggy-robes, two pairs of blankets and a breast-pin were stolen from different parties at the Fair Grounds on Monday afternoon. Officer Harris was advised of the theft and yesterday he succeeded in capturing the purloiner and recovering all of the goods except one of the robes. The thief's name, as given by him, is Geo. Simpson. Officer Harris was on the lookout for the fellow's confederates last night to recover the rest of the stolen property.

The ball to be given at Turn-Verein Hall by the Fair Association has been postponed until to-morrow evening. This change has been found necessary in consequence of the late rain, the delay in the opening of the pavilion and for the better accommodation of all the participants in the affair generally. Every preparation is being made for a grand time—probably the most brilliant of the kind ever given in Los Angeles.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of Mr. F. Hays, which appears under the head of "new to-day." Mr. Hays has lately arrived from San Francisco and has started a first-class saloon at No. 43 Main street, under the Lafayette Hotel. He keeps all kinds of human hair goods, such as wigs, switches, braids, curls, etc. Ladies can also have their own hair worked up to order on short notice and have satisfaction guaranteed.

We yesterday saw a spear of barley which had grown to the length of four and a half inches, starting from the seed some eight or nine days since with the first rain of the season. Arguing from this, the crops will have an early start this year.

In consequence of the late heavy rains Montgomery Queen's Circus and Menagerie has been detained above San Fernando and will not be here until Friday. The company will furnish entertainments, afternoon and evening on Friday and Saturday.

EASTERN.

Not Pleasant Over there.
NEW YORK, October 28th.—A Paris telegram to the London Times of the 13th says: "It is undeniable that things are not pleasant in Europe just now. Whatever calm there may be on the surface, there is an undercurrent of anxiety as to eventualities, which some believe are not very remote. The assurances of the great powers as to prospects of a long enduring peace, have not sufficed to dispel the uneasiness which has for its cause the alleged determination of Germany to harass and humiliate France and keep alive in her breast the sting of defeat, and use toward her at every opportunity a sort of petty pressure which may serve to remind her that she has met her master, and it behooves her to be modest in her attitude and submissive in her tone. A charge is brought by the French against the late conquerors, but the latter, on the other hand, repudiate the vexatious intention referred to them, and still more strongly deny the possibility of a fresh conflict."

Wool Market.
CHICAGO, October 28th.—The Boston wool market is without material change. The supply of Spring California is broken up by large purchase receipts. The Fall clip of California, California, Spring 42; Fall, 26-27c. In Philadelphia California is quoted at 26-27c, as to clip and quality. The New York market is very dull. California Fall is 26-28c.

WASHINGTON, October 25th.—Grant remains reticent on the subject of a third term. His friends say that he does not think the time has arrived to state his views in the matter.

New Orleans Registration.
CHICAGO, October 28th.—Registration is complete in New Orleans. Kellogg put the total at 165,000, with the negroes about 6,000 ahead of the whites.

Chauvin Postmaster; at Joaquin, Santa Barbara county, Daniel McCarty Postmaster; at Valley, Santa Diego county, John F. Turner, at Los Angeles; Los Angeles county; Edward E. Hollings at East Phoenix, Maricopa county, Arizona.

Argentine Republic in Danger of Downfall.

NEW YORK, October 24th.—The Herald, editorially referring to the insurrection in the Argentine Republic, says that unless some decided change has occurred, the downfall of the Argentine Republic is only a question of time. The wholesale desertion of its troops is rapidly reducing its military strength, and it now appears too weak to offer battle to the rebels under General Mitre and yet every moment of inaction gives the latter advantage.

Eighteen Thousand Voters Disfranchised.

NEW ORLEANS, October 24th.—The registry closed throughout the State last evening. The Republicans are 10,000 behind in the city and 30,000 ahead in the State. Attorney-General Field will publish to-morrow morning an official opinion against the legality of naturalization papers issued by the Second District Court. This strikes 18,000 from the list.

Resolutions strongly denouncing the action of the Attorney-General have been unanimously adopted by the Democratic and Conservative Central Committees.

Steamer Collision.

NEW YORK, October 24th.—This afternoon the White Star steamer Adriatic was going out, bound for Liverpool, she came into collision with the Cunard steamer Parthenia off Vanderbilt Landing, Staten Island. The two vessels struck on the starboard side, causing her to leak badly and she had to put back for repairs. The Parthenia proceeded on her voyage to Liverpool, having sustained but slight damage.

FOREIGN.

Over the Water.

LONDON, October 26th.—The Spanish Ambassador in London recently made representations to Lord Derby, Minister of Foreign Affairs, that supplies of arms and cartridges for the war manufactured in England were frequently shipped to the Carlists of Spain, and requested that all vigilance be taken by our authorities to prevent all such violations of neutrality. To this Lord Derby sharply replied that the indefinite continuance of war in Spain shows great lack of vigor and energy and that if the Spanish navy were vigilant the sailing of arms for the Carlists would be impossible.

The steamer Mary, from Glasgow for Trinidad, foundered on her voyage. Ten persons sunk with the vessel. A boat containing five more was wrecked. Another, containing two living and three dead bodies of the crew, was picked up.

VIENNA, October 26th.—The Foreign Office is informed that the insurrection in Montenegro is of small importance, growing out of frequently recurring encounters between hostile classes. The Porte promises to punish the murderers and all is considered settled.

City in Flames.

LONDON, October 24th.—Dispatches just received here from Tiflis, the capital city of Georgia, in Asiatic Russia, report an alarming conflagration there. The fire was first discovered in the principal theatre of the city, and owing to the scarcity of water the flames spread rapidly and soon enveloped almost the entire upper quarter of the city. Over one hundred and fifty houses have already been destroyed, and the fire still rages furiously. The theatre was entirely destroyed, together with many other buildings. The inhabitants are wild with excitement and fear, and everything is in confusion and disorder. It is probable that several lives have been lost.
